

Song At Sunfall

You have left me, you have left me, flying where the wild goose flies,
I shall never hear your footstep, never see you with these eyes
In my heart I still remember, I still hold your memory
But I will not tie you to me, from my heart I set you free

You have left me, you have left me, by the path we all must go
I shall one day see that darkness, then my final road I'll know
But my heart will still remember in that last great mystery
That once I knew you, loved you, and your love will set me free.